A SIMPLE SENSORY RESET

When your thoughts are racing faster than you can catch them, your senses can pull you back into your body. Take your time. There is no rush.

A PRACTICE YOU CAN RETURN TO, ANYTIME.

- 1

NOTICE
Pause and check in. What are you feeling right now? Name it without judgment.
- 2

SEE
Name five things you can see. Distant or close, real or remembered.
- 3

TOUCH
Name four things you can touch. Actually touch them if you can.
- 4

HEAR
Name three things you can hear. Soft sounds count too.
- 5

REST
Name two smells, then one taste. Let your body settle in.

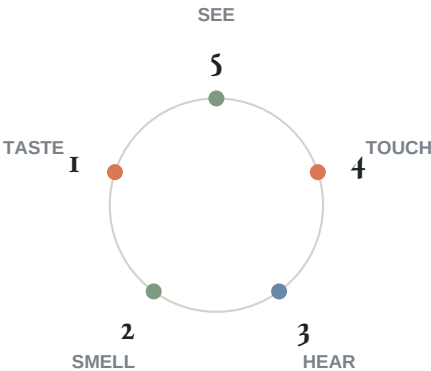

MAKE IT YOURS

Use this practice before a test, after a hard conversation, or anytime you feel yourself spiraling.

The breath is your anchor. Come back to it, and come back to yourself.

How did your body feel afterward? What softened, if anything?

You can return to this practice as many times as you need.

REPEAT AS OFTEN AS IT HELPS.
